Scientific and Technical Information (STI) Technical Review Instructions

1a. First Author/Initiator

Enter the name, affiliation, organization code, and phone number for the first author or the person initiating the form.

1b. Authors and Affiliations

Persons who performed the work described in the scientific and technical information (STI) document, who can effectively defend the main technical content to a peer group. (Unless someone else is designated as a contact person, questions about the report will be directed to the first author, who will be contacted to check the report.)

2. Report Title

Must match title on the STI document and on the Electronic Document Availability Authorization (EDAA)/NASA Form (NF) 1676.

3. Report Type

Select the appropriate report type. Only one report type may be selected. See NPR 2200.2, section 3.2, and Appendix D.

4a. Technical Reviews

Technical reviews assess the technical integrity and merit of the activity or research being performed and the results being documented. Technical reviews are to be completed outside of the EDAA/NF1676 process.

See NPR 2200.2, section 6.4

4b. Branch Chief review assures technical reviewers are appropriate, the number of reviewers is consistent with the report type, the report type is correct, and required resources are available (e.g., travel support).

5. Note: EDAA/NF1676 is available at: <https://strives.nasa.gov>
